

For several months I received virtually no unsolicited phone calls during the dinner hour. Wow! A chance to get thru the meal without being interrupted. In the last several weeks I have had calls that when I answered them there was a click and no one was there. Last night and just now I got one call each evening. I also had one this afternoon where the man sounded like he was drunk or had a mouth full of marbles. I would not order anything from a telemarketer so the they aren't losing anything by not calling me.
